Pak may use LeT confessions to get clean chit for ISI

New York, Jan 1 (PTI) Pakistan appears to be building a case for absolving ISI of any involvement in the Mumbai attacks, planning to use the confessions from Lashkar-e-Toiba militants to prove its argument that non-state actors "operating on their own" were behind the terror strikes.

Pakistani authorities have obtained confessions from members of LeT that they were involved in the November 26 attacks, the New York Times reported today, a day after a similar report appeared in the Wall Street Journal.

"After weeks of stonewalling, it also seems clear that Pakistan may use its investigation to make the case that the Mumbai attackers were not part of a conspiracy carried out with the spy agency...ISI, but that the militants were operating on their own and outside the control of government agents," the Times report said.

The most talkative of the senior Lashkar leaders being interrogated is said to be Zarrar Shah, a Pakistani official told the paper. American intelligence officials say they believe that Shah, the group's communications chief, has served as a conduit between the LeT and the ISI.

"These guys showed no remorse," said the Pakistani Official. "They were bragging. They didn't need to be pushed, tortured or waterboarded" into making their statements.

The confessions made no mention of any involvement by the Pakistani government, said the official, who added, "They talk about people acting on their own." (More) PTI SDG AKJ SDG 01012203 DELHI.

NC-led Kashmir ministry likely to take oath Jan 5 (Lead)

New Delhi, Jan 1 (IANS) The National Conference (NC)-led Jammu and Kashmir coalition ministry is likely to be sworn in Jan 5, as agreement with the Congress over the modalities of ministry formation was reached here Thursday.

Leaders of the Congress and the NC - the alliance partners in the state, which has been without an elected government since July - met in the national capital to work out the details of the alliance.

"We reached an agreement for the government formation," Congress leader in charge of Kashmir affairs Prithviraj Chavan told reporters after the meeting.

"Mechanism to review the function of the government, as and when found important, will be worked out later," Chavan said.

Abdullah is set to lead the new government of the state - at 38 he will be currently India's youngest chief minister - after the Congress high command in New Delhi Tuesday agreed to extend its legislative support to the NC, which is the single largest party in the assembly.

Mr. Chavan said the talks went on in a cordial atmosphere and asserted that the two parties will fight the upcoming Lok Sabha elections together.

"We will write to the Lok Sabha Speaker and the Rajya Sabha Chairman to include the NC in the Congress-led United Progressive Alliance (UPA)," Abdullah said.

The NC has three Lok Sabha members and one in the Rajya Sabha.

Before the meeting, Chavan said : "We wish even the Peoples Democratic Party (PDP) to remain a part of the UPA. But in view of the alliance with the NC, we need to examine various aspects."
